

The New Practice — Logo Concept

RATIONALE & VARIATIONS

The thinking behind the mark

The symbol at the center of the mark is drawn from the ceiba tree — the sacred "world tree" of Maya belief, said to connect the underworld, the earthly plane, and the heavens through a single trunk. Three branches rise, three roots descend, and all six meet at one point. It's a direct, literal image of "one client, one team, one purpose," and it's rooted specifically in the Riviera Maya rather than being a generic wellness leaf or lotus.

The single gold point at the center is the only accent color anywhere in the identity — it marks "the one" every time it appears.

Color and type

The palette stays deliberately quiet: a deep, near-black canopy green, a warm bone/alabaster, and one aged-brass gold as the sole accent. Nothing bright, nothing clinical-white — the goal is private and grounded, not sterile.

The wordmark is set in a high-contrast serif in the Didot/Bodoni family — the same style of typeface Cartier, Vogue, and Chanel use for their wordmarks — paired with a plain geometric sans for the tagline underneath. That pairing (thin, elegant serif + quiet sans) is the classic high-fashion combination, and it's meant to read as old-money and discreet rather than clinical.

The variations

Five versions of the mark, for different uses:

Primary lockup — light background. Website header, letterhead, general use.

THE NEW PRACTICE

PRIVATE TREATMENT WITHOUT COMPROMISE

Reversed lockup — dark background. Dark website sections, evening signage.

THE NEW PRACTICE

PRIVATE TREATMENT WITHOUT COMPROMISE

Horizontal lockup — business cards, email signatures, wide signage, letterhead.

Icon alone — favicon, app icon, social avatar, small plaque.

THE NEW PRACTICE

PRIVATE TREATMENT WITHOUT COMPROMISE

Single-color version — engraving, embossing, foil stamping, embroidery, fax.
